GATHERED UP.

You hear "He was one of the best men that ever lived" often than "He is one of the best men that ever lived."

The good things of life grow slow, but it is different with bills and scandal.

A Pittsburg paper announces that the public sympathy is with the miners. It may be in Pittsburg but everywhere else it is with the consumer who pays for the coal.

The next issue of New York City bonds will bear 4-1/2 per cent interest. When the last issue was made at 4-1/2 per cent it was difficult to market the bonds.

A popular American once wrote to Rudyard Kipling: "Hearing that you are retelling literature at $1 a word, I enclose $1 for a sample." Mr. Kipling sent him the single word "Thanks" and kept the dollar.

A Journal American once wrote to Rudyard Kipling: "Hearing that you are retelling literature at $1 a word, I enclose $1 for a sample." Mr. Kipling sent him the single word "Thanks" and kept the dollar.

Brooklyn desires a $15 tax limit, and City Treasurer W. H. Emerson is explaining the need of the change before the Legislative committee emphasized the fact that without this extension the city will have to borrow $32,000 this year to pay running expenses.

It is an encouragement to young men to persevere under adverse opinions to note that the first employer of the great merchant, the late Marshall Field of Chicago, after a year's trial, wrote to his parents, "He will never make a merchant. Try him at something else."

A Lack of Acquaintance. "Why do you insist on despoiling wealth?" "Perhaps," said the man with the artistic temperament, "it is because I never got well enough acquainted with it to know its good qualities."—Washington Star.

One morning a Sunday school was about to be dismissed, and the youngsters were already in strong protest from their cramped little limbs after the hours of confinement on straight-backed chairs and benches, when the superintendent arose, and instead of the usual dismissal announced:

"And now, children, let me introduce Mr. Smith, who will give a short talk." Mr. Smith smilingly arose, and, after gazing impressively around the classroom, began with: "I hardly know what to say, when the whole school was convulsed to hear a small, thin voice back in the rear whisper:

"They amn this and that down."—Savannah News.

To Be Safe—Roast High. Mark Twain, at a dinner in New York, told a story from his native town of Hannibal, Mo.

"There are in the world," he said, "a good many men like Jonathan Scarborough of Hannibal.

"Scarborough was one of those men, with nothing but absolutely known against them, who are yet looked on, and no doubt justly, with suspicion.

"It was thought of Scarborough that for a poor man, he ate too much chicken. And one day the town folk felt he was arrested for chicken-stealing.

"A witness was called to testify about Scarborough's character.

"Did you ever know this man to steal poultry?" said the lawyer for the defense.

"No, I never did," said the witness. "But this is what I do know—I was a chicken, and Jonathan Scarborough was about, I'd roost high."

The Power of Prayer. Those who make a study of the universe and realized the number of world's scattered throughout space, and that this world was but a pin point in the infinite ether, could not take the view that man was the highest intelligent being in the universe. Once they dropped beyond man, and said he was not the highest, they could not stop until they arrived at the Deity. They could not stop short at infinity, and when they found that a simple request to a fellow man could produce effect, how could they deny the power of prayer?—Sir Oliver Lodge, quoted in London Chronicle.

George W. Wallace, president of the Boston Monetary Committee, is one of the best known residents of Salt Lake, tells this as his latest telephone story:

In a certain western central office one hello girl was always late in arriving in the morning. Time and again the manager pleaded with her to be more prompt. Her tardiness continued until he was moved to desperate methods.

"Now Miss B," he said one morning as he came to her exchange with a package in his hands, "I have a little scheme which I hope will enable you to arrive at the office on time. Here is a fine alarm clock for you. Promise me that you will use it."

The young woman promised and accordingly set the alarm clock for the proper hour when she retired that night. At 10 o'clock the next morning there was a tremendous whirring from the alarm clock. The sleep-hello girl rolled over in bed and said sweetly:

"Line busy; call again."—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Curate's Cure. A zealous young curate was to stay with some friends at a country house. On descending to break the first morning he noticed that his hostess inquired very particularly how he had slept, and seemed relieved when he said he had passed a very good night. This was repeated every day during his visit until the last morning, when his hostess said, "Mr. Curate, you perhaps noticed how very particular we were in our inquiries every morning as to how you had slept, but the truth is the room is said to be haunted and we were anxious to know if you had seen the ghost."

"The ghost?" repeated the curate thoughtfully, "oh, yes, I do remember the first night I was here some fellow came and stood by my bedside."

"Oh!" said the company, with great interest, "and what did you do?"

"Oh, I spoke to him."

"I said, 'Please will you give me a subscription for my Sunday school?'" He instantly disappeared and I never saw him again."—The Tatler.

Keep Our Historic Names. The proposed change of the name of Dorchester street, in South Boston, to St. Augustine avenue, has naturally aroused a just and strong protest from those whose right it is that their remembrance should be heard and respected. Sentiment is a wholesome and powerful civic force, especially when it rests upon associations hallowed by age, tradition and history. By the neglectful hands of their Dress-hy Nature and render themselves less available than has been made them. But, all this being granted, "will by no means justify that excessive Curiosity and Solitude, that Excessive Time and Money, too, which is now used."

Obstinate Royal Invalid. "A king has the right to die, but not the right to be killed," said Lord Salisbury to his doctors, forbidding them at the same time to publish the truth about his condition. Alexander I, perhaps in the midst of the most brilliant of his reign, died of a heart attack on his throne, acted upon the same principle, though he did not embody it in a paradoxical epigram. For more than forty-eight hours—nearly during the night—his doctors, who were not permitted to leave his bedside, refused to be bled, notwithstanding the urgent persuasion to that effect of his own physician, James Welles, and of the medical attendants of the emperor. On the 14th, toward evening, Wallace, finding all persuasion useless, plainly told the czar that, having refused the aid of science till it was too late, he had no resource left but the aid of religion. "And I have an idea that that will prove a broken reed to you," said the blunt physician to a worthy predecessor of Zachary. "I am afraid that religion will be of little use to the man whose obstinacy in refusing to be bled is tantamount to suicide." Thirty hours later the eldest son of Paul I. had breathed his last.

An Artistic Paradox. Capri, beautiful in itself as a winter resort, offers an irresistible invitation to artists, since it has an inn where any one, by pointing a picture on the wall, can get free board. To the lovely island of Capri, with its perennial summer, its blue groves and its lemon groves, went some fifty years ago an artist almost on the verge of ruin. In his will, leaving the inn to his heirs, he made these conditions:

"The charge per week, two bottles of red Capri wine included, is never to be more than 6 francs. If any artist is too poor to pay he shall paint a picture upon some wall space, receiving all the accommodations accorded to those paying the highest price. If any German artist shall come to the inn he shall be accommodated and shall receive the amount of his fare to return to Italy."

The inn is conducted today on these conditions. Its walls are covered with paintings.

MANAGING HUSBANDS.

Some Eighteenth Century Ideas on This Interesting Subject.

Now, again, it is the custom to confine women contained in an old book published in 1757. The volume describes itself as "An infallible guide to the Fair Sex, containing Rules, Directions, and Observations for their Conduct and Behaviour through all Ages and Circumstances of Life; as Virgins, Wives, or Widows, with Directions how to obtain all their civil and fashionable Accomplishments suitable to the Sex."

If the lady's husband was choleric she was told how to secure her own way by detestably yielding everything till he begins to cool, and then by slow degrees she may rise and gain upon the Man; or when other Remedies are too weak, a little Flattery may be admitted, which, by being necessary, will cease to be criminal."

With a choleric husband, pride, ambition, vanity, anger, kindness or even a dash of wine may be expected to open or enlarge his narrow Mind."

The wife must be to watch for critical moments, and not let one of them slip, and make the place my home."

Letter to Geo. L. Wentworth
South Weymouth, Mass.

Dear Sir: Two and two make four—not always; depends upon what "two and two" are.

Two gallons of water and two gallons of milk don't make four gallons of milk. Neither does four gallons of paint that's half time, whitening, clay and kerosene oil, make four gallons of red paint.

That's what we mean by saying "Fewer gallons; wears longer." It takes fewer gallons of Devco lead-and-ine than of mixed paints to paint a house, and it wears twice or three times as long as lead-and-ine mixed by hand.

Mr. Chas. Avery, of Herkimer N. Y., bought 55 gallons of Devco lead-and-ine to paint his house. His painter having figured that it would require at least that amount; 36 gallons did the work and he returned 15 gallons.

Yours truly,

P. S. Everett Lord, East Weymouth, and M. R. Lord, South Weymouth, sell our paint.

Finland Marriage Notes.

Marriage lots in Finland, as in Norway, are often prolonged for several days, even among folk of humble rank. One peculiarity, which may excite more surprise than approval among English authors in our own country, is that the Finnish lover never himself "pops the question" to the girl of his choice. The betrothal proposal is made through a third person, the called the "talmant," to whom the happy couple give a present when his delicate mediation proves successful and ends in a wedding. Not uncommonly their gift to the talmant takes the anomalous form of a shirt.

In like manner the clergyman who presides over the funeral service receives a simple and inexpensive present, often a handkerchief and a pair of warm hair gloves. A similar gift is by no means infrequently made to the undertaker. Upon these mournful occasions the service is exceedingly simple and more so than would satisfy the views of British undertakers—but the burial is, as a rule, followed by large hospitality on the part of the bereaved family.

An Experiment With Water.

Take a pound of water the temperature of which is 80 degrees C. and mix it with a pound of water at zero, or freezing point. The mixture will make two pounds of water the temperature of which is 40 degrees.

Now take another pound of water at 80 degrees C. and mix with it a pound of crushed ice that is, ice crystals at zero C. the same temperature as the cold water in the first mixture, and the result is that we have two pounds of water at freezing point.

In both cases the weight of water at zero C. introduced into the warm water was the same, but before the ice crystals could assume a liquid condition they had to absorb a certain amount of heat. That heat was drawn from the warm water and consequently reduced its temperature, but it did not raise the temperature of the ice. It simply acted as energy in enabling the ice to become liquid and remained in that liquid in the form of latent heat, to be given up again as soon as the water resumed a crystalline form.

Waterman-Bowman.

At the residence of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Bacon, No. 5 Fifth avenue, Wednesday, N. Y., Feb. 20, afternoon, Feb. 14, their niece, Miss Olive L. Bowman, was married to Irvine 19 Waterman of South Weymouth, Mass.

Mr. Waterman for several years past has been one of the staff of engineers connected with the New York, New Haven and Hartford R. R. in its improvement of the road between this city and New York.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. George F. Bellinger, pastor of the English Lutheran church at Nyack, N. Y. The best man was the Hon. George L. Barnes of South Weymouth, Mass., a Representative of the Massachusetts Legislature. The bridesmaid was Miss Sybil M. Brodsky of New York City. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Bacon, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Brodsky and daughter Althea, Dr. and Mrs. Moler, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bragg, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bacon, Mr. and Mrs. Moore, Dr. Fagan and Dr. Daley.

After the ceremony and tendering of congratulations by the friends, a supper was served, after which the happy bride and groom started on their wedding trip and a shower of rice, for Washington the bride is young and handsome and of a most amiable disposition, and the marriage will no doubt prove a happy one. The groom wore the conventional afternoon dress and the bride's costume consisted of a pale blue silk trimmed with lace, she wore no jewels, although the recipient of a handsome diamond brooch as a wedding gift.

The presents were numerous and handsome and the guests had a very enjoyable evening. Best wishes for their happiness and prosperity.
